Dear Hiring Manager,

My name is Katinka Lennemann; I am excited to apply for the Data, Results and Strategic Foresight Intern in Bonn, Germany. I am a UCLA graduate with a double degree in Applied Mathematics and Statistics, so this role deeply aligns with the skills I can provide.

My background is in impact-based work. Currently, I work as a Sustainability Specialist at the County of San Mateo. In this role, I pay special attention to how to leverage existing and past sources of data to support our existing programs and further our climate action planning goals. This skill will translate well into this data-focused role because I am experienced in working in a setting where it is important to provide transparency to the public eye. I'm also used to pulling data and formatting it for program managers and staff to report to funders and county supervisors, which will help tremendously in this UN role as well in annual reporting and communication to UN partners.

In this role, I've also used AI to speed up and strengthen workflows, through utilizing the provided GovAI platform in outsourcing data transcription and data analysis tasks, especially useful in processing large amounts of data that come in through reporting for multiple programs and their associated reporting metrics. This will help with UN data reporting to ensure practices stay up to date with technological advances. I'm also detail oriented in setting up documentation so data and reporting processes may be preserved across role turnover.

Finally, I believe there is a strong values match here with UN Women because I believe in making the world a better place through working in public agencies with an impact-driven mission. As a woman in a STEM field, I know what it feels like to imposter syndrome and feel out of place. My mother too was a housewife supporting me in all the years as I grew up; I would like work in supporting an organization that provides young women with the opportunity to chase the careers and lives that they want to live.

I will be relocating to Bonn, Germany in January 2026 and would love to support UN women in their mission through this role while I am there. Thank you for considering my application.

Sincerely,
Katinka Lennemann
